“I encourage everyone who has COVID-19 symptoms or who has been exposed to someone who has COVID-19 to get tested,” said Dr. Julie Vaishampayan, Stanislaus County Public Health Officer. “Testing for COVID-19 is essential to limiting spread and protecting your family, friends, and community.”

COVID-19 symptoms include fever, shortness of breath, cough, runny nose, muscle aches, headache, fatigue, loss of taste or smell, diarrhea, and vomiting. To slow the spread of COVID-19, Public Health encourages community members to continue following the recommended practices such as:

- Keeping a distance of 6 feet between people who are not a part of their household to minimize transmission of the disease,
- Wearing a cloth face covering where social distancing is difficult,
- Washing hands frequently with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, and
- Staying home and away from others when sick
